Letter from the Founder

WHY PIANOS FOR PEACE

The city of Atlanta has vast cultural resources, yet too many among us have minimal access to arts experiences. One of the most disheartening statistics is the decline of arts education in underserved populations, especially in elementary schools. Students in underserved communities who are highly engaged in the arts are more likely than their peers with low arts involvement to obtain gainful employment, complete college, and volunteer in their communities. ⁽¹⁾

Pianos for Peace is committed to bringing meaningful arts programs to our under-resourced schools, community centers, healthcare and senior care facilities. Each Pianos for Peace program is defined by the needs of our partner communities, the volunteer service of artists, and by our commitment to build peace through music and education.

Music Therapy is one of our three major programs that serve schools, hospitals, and nursing homes in our community. The majority of our hospital patients and nursing home residents have never experienced creative arts, ⁽²⁾ despite the proven fact that music therapy heals. ⁽³⁾ Music education provides personal benefits to students that enrich their lives. Participating in an ensemble enhances feelings of self-achievement, assisted individuals in overcoming challenges, and builds self-confidence. ⁽⁴⁾ Moreover, the social benefits of music education can continue throughout a student's life and career. ⁽⁵⁾

This report will outline the benefits of our outdoor festival, as well as the positive impact on the community through our year-round arts programs. Only through meaningful partnerships and joining hands with champions for the arts and our Ambassadors for Peace, are we able to unite people and uplift the lives of individuals and families.

We thank you for your generous support and contributions to transform communities through the soft power of the arts. Let's unite to help make the arts accessible to all and build peace through music and education.

In harmony,

Malek Jandali
Founder & CEO

“Pianos for Peace is making people come together around something common to celebrate traditions and it says things that people really cannot say in words. In a way, that’s what music does. It takes down barriers.”

 Director of Rialto Center for the Arts at Georgia State University

Pianos for Peace has partnered with more than 29 nonprofit organizations, engaged more than 65 artists in community volunteer programs, and donated 95 pianos to local community-based organizations in metro Atlanta. Our community arts programs have served thousands of individuals in under-resourced schools, veterans’ centers, nursing homes, and hospitals.

COMMUNITY ARTS

The Pianos for Peace outdoor festival is the organization's annual two-week Community Arts Program that features pianos painted by local artists in the parks and public spaces of Atlanta for anyone to play and everyone to enjoy. We then donate the pianos to Title I Schools, nursing homes and hospitals where they become permanent homes for future Pianos for Peace community arts programs.

Pianos for Peace is one of Atlanta's largest annual public arts displays, receiving more than 30 million media impressions. In 2019, the organization displayed 88 painted pianos throughout three counties of greater Atlanta, including two in the world's busiest airport at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport, five Atlanta Beltline locations, and six Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority (MARTA) stations – the first collaboration of its kind since the tracks were laid in 1979.

“ This is spreading everyone's different experiences across the city and it is very beneficial to our campus. I actually would really like this to stay here but I know it would be in a better place if it were in a nursing home or somewhere where people need it most. This has definitely been a great experience.

MUSIC THERAPY

Pianos for Peace serves the community and uplifts lives through meaningful healing arts programs, bedside performances and music therapy workshops. We engage local volunteer artists to share their time and talents to serve seniors in nursing homes, people with disabilities in special care centers, and hospital patients in treatment centers through our dynamic arts programs.

Healing Arts Program

Pianos for Peace believes that caring for hospital patients goes beyond medical treatment. The atmosphere surrounding children and families is vitally important to promoting physical and emotional well-being. Through the soft power of music, art and education, we provide healing arts programs that are truly special.

“Music has healing power. It has the ability to take people out of themselves for a few hours.”

~ Elton John

“I need something else to do. The older we get we need to keep our mind occupied. Coming down here and playing the piano is something that can occupy our thoughts.”

Brenan Towers Resident
- Atlanta Retirement Community

“At the deepest level, the creative process and the healing process arise from a single source. When you are an artist, you are a healer: a wordless trust of the same mystery is the foundation of your work with integrity.”

HEALING ARTS and MUSIC THERAPY

Pianos for Peace expanded their Healing Arts program by mobilizing “Ambassadors for Peace” who help run programs at nursing homes and healthcare facilities and ensure high-quality experiences for all involved. Thanks to this new program, we were able to increase the reach of our Music Therapy programs by 22% this year, serving 3,500 individuals in 11 partner sites, up from 3,000 individuals in 9 sites last year.

ARTS EDUCATION

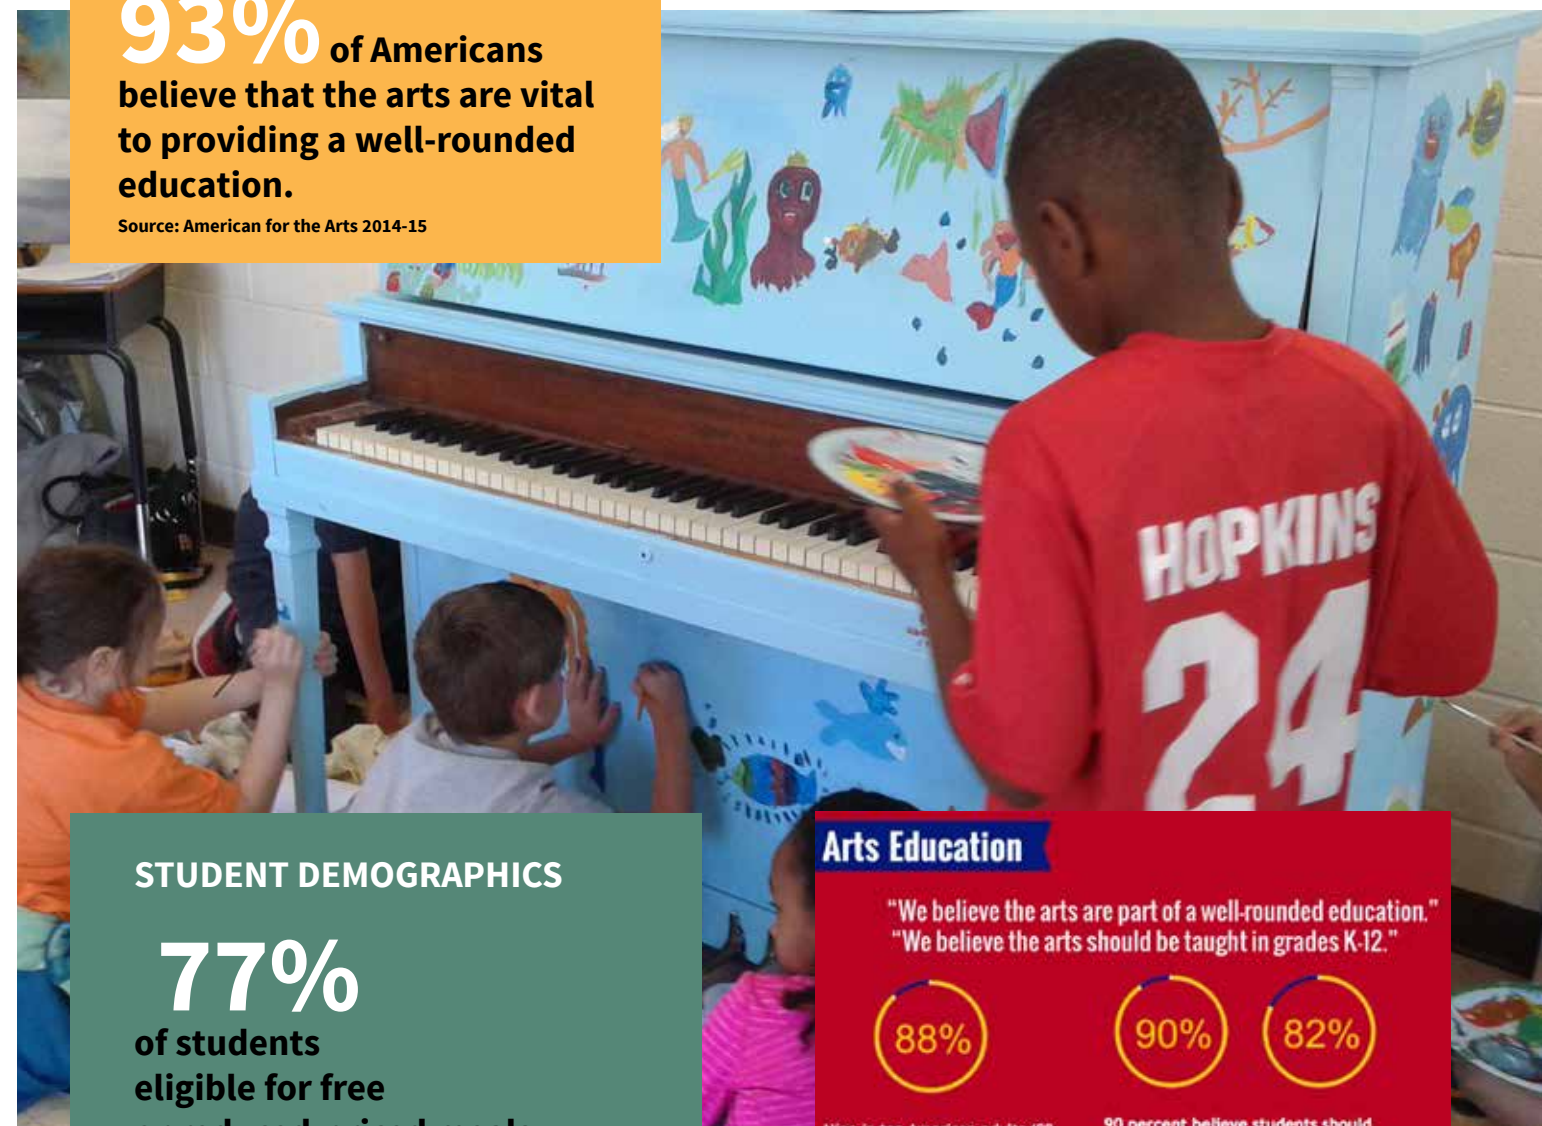

Pianos for Peace’s Arts Education program focuses on servicing students in underserved communities in the greater Atlanta area. Our meaningful partnerships throughout the city and across three counties (Fulton, Forsyth, DeKalb) enable us to connect public schools with volunteer artists. We mobilize and empower more than 100 volunteers and professional artists - from classical musicians to photographers to filmmakers - in volunteer service programs that benefit communities in need.

Pianos For Peace joins hands with creative arts instructors to deliver dynamic learning experiences and educational workshops that encourage self-expression, stimulate confidence, nurture positive development, and enhance self-esteem in young people and students at Title I schools and under-resourced learning centers. The organization also engages in benefit concerts that raise awareness and funds in partnerships with nonprofit organizations in the community.

Arts Education

“We believe the arts are part of a well-rounded education.”
“We believe the arts should be taught in grades K-12.”

Nine in ten American adults (88 percent) agree that the arts are part of a well-rounded K-12 education.

90 percent believe students should receive an education in the arts in elementary school, middle school, and high school. 82 percent say the arts should also be taught outside of the classroom in the community.

“Our partnership on your creative peacemaking through music and the arts is transforming our communities and bringing people together. We are honored to be part in your community arts programs that have tremendous impact on youth in our schools. You empower local artists and are definitely making a positive impact in Atlanta.”

Justin Clay, Executive Director and Founder, Music from the Heart Fine Arts (FY19 Pianos For Peace Partner)

The majority of this year's 88 Pianos for Peace were awarded to Atlanta Public Schools serving all age groups and grades through a competitive application process. The Pianos for Peace are being used for everything from pre-K music classes to high school chorus ensembles, musical productions, dance rehearsals, and piano lessons. In addition to donating the colorful Pianos for Peace Pianos, we collaborate on providing a year-round Community Arts Education programs that include workshops, and performances throughout the school year.

AMBASSADORS FOR PEACE

Pianos for Peace established long-term partnerships with the Atlanta and DeKalb County Police Departments through the Ambassadors for Peace program to unite the communities and build peace in the city. The Ambassador For Peace program also embarked on special collaborations with the Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority (MARTA), and four of the state's top academic institutions: Emory University, Spelman College, GeorgiaTech and Georgia State University. The historic partnership with MARTA was especially meaningful, as it was the first time since its inception in 1979 that the organization permitted musical instruments to be displayed in stations around the city. Pianos for Peace were placed in 6 stations (Five Points, College Park, H.E. Holmes, North Springs, King Memorial and Doraville) reaching the more than 550,000 passengers per day that ride MARTA and five of the state's top academic institutions: Emory University, GeorgiaTech, Georgia State University, Fort Valley State University, and Spelman College.

Every year, our board of directors recognizes exceptional individuals and organizations for their commitment to uniting communities and promoting arts and peace. Our Ambassadors for Peace include Chief Erika Shields, Chief George N. Turner of the Atlanta Police Department and Dr. Cedric L. Alexander of the DeKalb County Police Department.

“ This is an amazing opportunity for us to speak about peace, and what we are doing in Atlanta is uniquely different. I am extremely proud to be a part of the Pianos for Peace initiative. The importance of music, it brings so many people together, from so many different walks of life. ”

Chief George Turner, Atlanta Police Department

This year the Pianos for Peace board of directors presented the 2019 Ambassador for Peace Awards to Emmitt Stevenson, Deputy Director of Fulton County Arts and Culture and Jeff Golden, Oregon State Senator. The 2019 Teamwork Award was awarded to Vincenzo Piscopo, Executive Director of Wheels of Happiness Foundation. Previous Ambassadors for Peace include Dr. Meria Joel Carstarphen, Superintendent of Atlanta Public Schools and Maestra Marin Alsop, Music Director of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra.

Pianos for Peace strongly believes in engaging youth in schools and academic institutions, and the partnerships with students, faculty and staff at Fort Valley State University, Spelman College, Georgia Tech, Washington High School, Grady High School Philharmonic Orchestra and Martha Ellen Stilwell School of the Arts did just that. With painted pianos on the campuses, students of all backgrounds and talents joined together to celebrate their community through music, art and education.

In sharing our mission of making the arts accessible to all, our Ambassadors for Peace program was instrumental in uplifting lives and impacting positive social change in our communities.

SPREADING PEACE

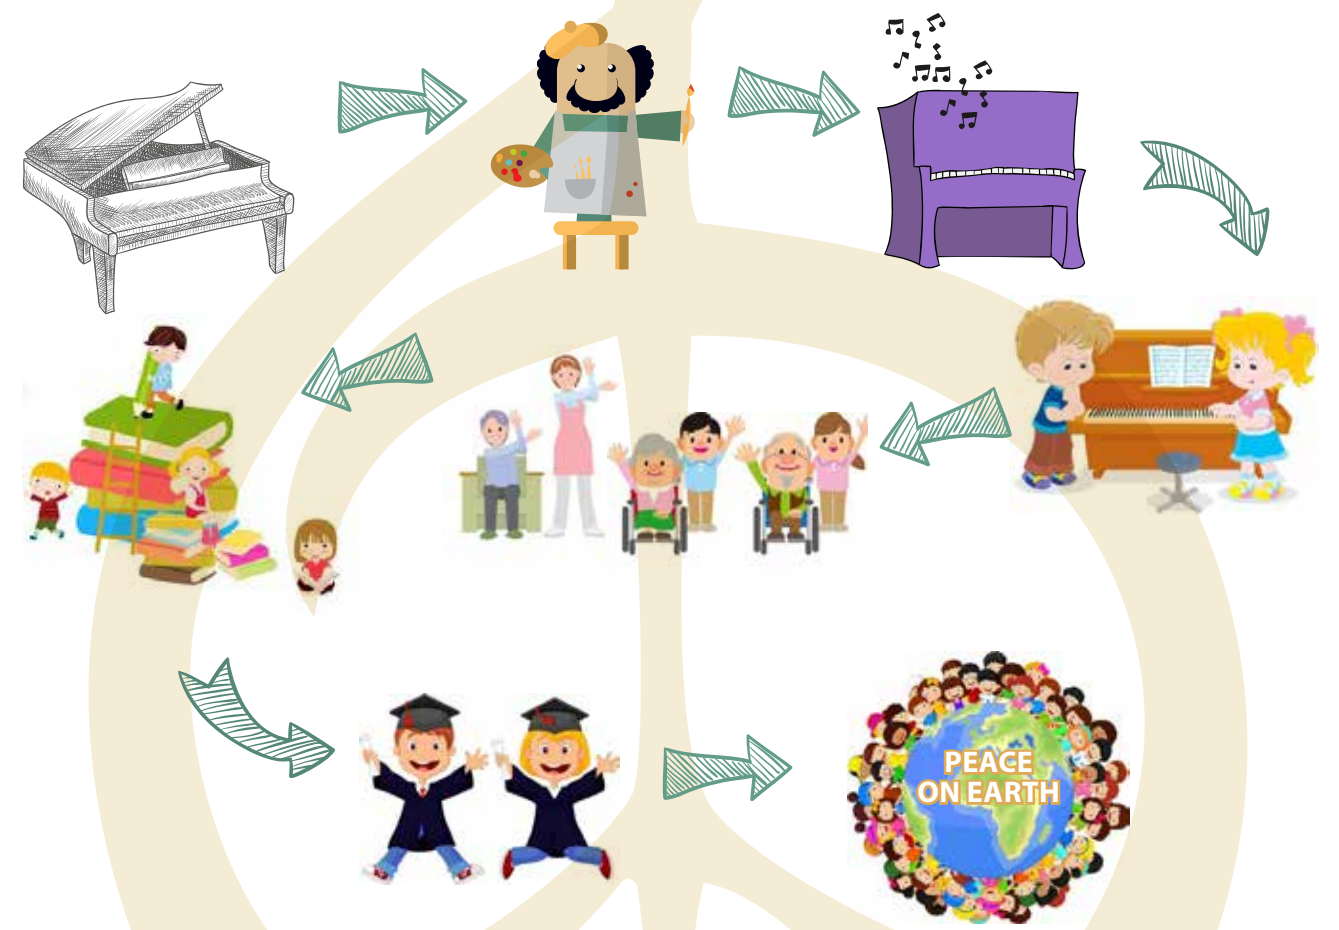

The volunteer artists of Pianos for Peace are the engines that power our broad range of community outreach programs, inspiring and fostering positive change for those in need. Our Ambassadors for Peace roster lies at the core of our mission and features artist volunteers from almost every artistic discipline — musicians, classical and jazz instrumentalists, dancers, choreographers, composers, designers, directors, photographers, and more. Working in tandem with our dedicated staff, our roster of artists donates their time and talent to give back to local communities, especially in underserved areas in our mission to make the arts accessible to all.

A LOOK AHEAD TO FY20

ATLANTA

Pianos for Peace

Launched in partnership with the City of Atlanta Office of Cultural Affairs, Pianos for Peace is mobilizing high school students through our year-round community programs in which students will conceive, organize, and execute programs and events that teach them and their peers how to give back to their communities through the arts.

USA

Spreading Peace

Pianos for Peace Vermont was launched in October 2018 and we replicated our successful festival and community programs in partnership with Anima Mundi Production with the 2019 Pianos for Peace Oregon.

Quality of Commute

Pianos for Peace has developed a strategic partnership with both the Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport and MARTA while working to bring colorful painted pianos to leading international transit hubs and bus terminals driving a platform of "quality of commute."

Cultural Diplomacy

Pianos for Peace is driving the international movement for increased inclusion of the arts, along with politics and economics, in major forums and conventions such as The Skoll Forum and United Nations centering on positive social change in the world.

Pianos for Peace founder, Malek Jandali, believes that music has the power to transform communities and impact positive social change. As an international renowned composer and pianist, he has led panels and shared his vision at The United Nations, Harvard University, The Skoll World Forum on Social Entrepreneurship, Georgia Tech TEDx, The Aspen Ideas Festival, Gusi International Peace Summit and Duke University among others.

In 2015, the Carnegie Corporation of New York recognized him as a Carnegie Great Immigrant – The Pride of America – along with Yo-Yo Ma and Itzhak Perlman for his commitment to peace and his notable contributions to the progress of our society.

The mission of Pianos for Peace, to build peace through music and education, is rooted in Malek's belief that music changes people, and people change the world.
